Course Description: The course builds on The Introduction to Political Ideologies but may be taken without that. It aims at elaborating on either of the four 'non-classic' or 'newer' ideologies that greatly shape our present: nationalism (the birth, definitions and future of nations), feminism (an overview of British-American 1-3 rd wave-feminism), and religious fundamentalism or ecologism. The seminar is designed in a way that an introduction - including student-presentation(s) - is followed by a debate on readings and issues covered by them, focusing on pros and cons of certain topics and students will be required to take sides and argue in defense of their position.
